Hello,

I am writing in support of full (or as close to full as possible, given the budget) restoration of Caltrain service. As a researcher at Stanford who has been working in person most of the pandemic, the current reduced schedule is a major issue, especially as my home station is one that is currently only getting 1x/hr service. In addition, the ridership is increasing to the point where soon it will make social distancing more difficult, which more trains will help with.

Thank you,

PS
This is unrelated but I am also a bit confused as to why clipper card readers are being removed from the stations? 22nd street southbound now seems to only have a single reader, and that one rather awkwardly placed behind the kiosk and a trash can. It isn’t a major problem now, but definitely will be as ridership continues to increase.
